Girl

Author's Notes:
Poor sweet Axl. And I wanted to try a drabble, punishing word count.

Late night, streetlights making little halos of light on the sidewalk, darkness in between. I didn't know how late it was, judging by the silence and the position of the moon it had to be pretty late. Soon it would be early and the whole thing would start to spin again. I didn't know why I was walking around this town this late at night but I couldn't sleep. I could never sleep.

I heard catcalls and whistles and I saw the cop car, saw the cops leaning against it in their blue uniforms. They thought I was a girl.
